When I moved to Dunedin in 1998 I always knew that one day I would live in Brighton. My wife and I moved here in 2014 with our 2 children. It was home.

We live just off the Otakia stream and have marvelled at the bird life that we a privy too out here.

We regularly collect mussels and paua literally a couple of 100 metres from our doorstep.

Every person that lives out here feels blessed, in fact most of us out here talk about living in paradise.

The thought that the DCC would jeopardize one of New Zealand's most beautiful beaches not to mention wildlife, not to mention one of Otago's coastal ~~tourist~~ attractions completely dumbfounds me.

To risk an environmental disaster by putting near a Fault Line (WHAT!?)

This makes me feel unsafe.

This is affecting my mental wellbeing.

It seems underhanded and quite frankly stupid.

Yours Sincerely

Mac Jeoman.
